CLIENT CONSENT FORM

CLIENT NAME:

D.O.B:

NATURE OF COUNSELLING WORK

As a counsellor, I aim to create a corrective experience where distressing issues can be discussed and resolved by using various psychotherapeutic measures. This means you are empowered to discover solutions to issues in a supportive environment. I offer you my honesty and respect while we explore issues you feel you would like to bring to counselling at the times that we have agreed upon.

SESSION PARTICULARS

Records of Sessions

Casenotes will be made during the session, as well as outside of the session. All documents will be kept in a safe and secure location, only accessible by the counsellor.

Appointments

Sessions will last a duration of 45 to 60 minutes and typically 10 sessions will be booked per client. *Please take note: 24 Hours notice should be given when cancelling a session. Cancelations made less than 24 hours before the scheduled session will still be invoiced and the client will be liable to pay 100% of the session fee.

COUNSELLOR ROLES & RESPONSIBILITIES

- To be available at the agreed time and to start and end sessions on time.
- To offer a quiet appropriate and undisturbed space.
- To maintain safe, professional boundaries.
- To regard all contact and information as confidential, unless they have reasonable doubt concerning the safety of the client or others.
- To encourage client autonomy.
- To work within the HPCSA's framework (available upon request).
- To review therapeutic work and relationship regularly. Counsellors may not diagnose mental illness, but instead, will refer if suspect thereof.
- To put an end to counselling and refer clients, when ethical and professional boundaries have been breached.
- To communicate the progress and possible needs of the client to relevant authorities and guardians.

CLIENT ROLES & RESPONSIBILITIES

- To attends sessions punctually.
- Communicating with the counsellor; outside agreed counselling sessions to be limited to making, changing or cancelling an appointment unless by prior arrangement.
- To be respectful to the counsellors and their property.
- To discuss with the counsellor when you feel you are ready to end the counselling sessions.
- To let the counsellor know if you are in, ore are considering entering into another therapeutic relationship.
- It is of severe importance that you are open and honest at all times, in order to establish a trustworthy bond between client and counsellor.
- To continue working towards improvement outside of counselling sessions, following the counsellor's recommendations.

CONFIDENTIALITY

There are boundaries and limits to confidentiality. Confidentiality may be broken if:

The client or others, in the opinion of the counsellor, seem to be in danger or at serious risk of being harmed.
The counsellor is required to do so by subpoena.
The client infers knowledge of or involvement in illegal activities.
The client infers knowledge of or involvement in behaviours that may, in the Counsellor's opinion, lead to harm or neglect to children and vulnerable adults.

Supervision

I monitor my own practice by attending regular supervision for myself and am committed to my own self-development. There are times where aspects of my sessions will be taken to supervision to monitor and improve my practice; my supervisor is a professional that is committed to our contracted confidentiality.
